Serbia must be feeling how it seems to be the nut in the crackers.

The central powers have to present nearly as many fronts as the average Canadian politician.

It is barely possible that if Greece ever asks for Cyprus she will find that her desire to possess it came too late.

The National Liberal club in the Old Country is initiating a movement for the setting aside a day to be known as "Cavell day," on which the nation collectively would pay homage to the memory of Miss Edith Cavell, the English nurse executed in Belgium by the German military authorities.

We are sure there will be no Cavell-ing at this from any loyal subject of the Empire.

Geo. E. Buck, the Black Diamond Oil president, for whom warrants were issued on a charge of "salting" or "doctoring" No. 1 Black Diamond well with suppositious oil, has given himself up with a smile.

Some time ago Buck skipped out, and has since been Buck-ing the long arm of the law at a game of "hide-and-seek."

But Buck found Bucking the long-arm-of-the-law game a tough proposition, particularly with Chief Curdy at the other end.

And the Bucking oil-promoter buster was glad to come to terms and give himself up.

No, the name of the cabinet minister who held his breath for ten minutes was not Sir Sam.

Now comes Turkey with accusations against the Allies for atrocities. And when it comes to atrocities, leave it to Turkey to know what they are.

The German under secretary is out with his own statement in justification of the shooting of Edith Cavell, and we suppose it will ease his conscience. It won't alter anybody's opinion of the affair.

British Tommies are wearing steel helmets in the trenches now just like the French.

Taken, no doubt, from the Parisian fashion plates.

CHINOOK SCHOOL

More Accommodation for the Pupils Needed

From a school report in another column, it will be noticed that there are 46 pupils now in attendance in the junior room of the Chinook public school, and it is expected that in a few weeks' time this number will be increased to 65. Where are the trustees going to put them? The seating capacity of the room is full now. In view of the defeat of the consolidated school for this district, it is clear something will have to be done towards a new and larger school building—or refuse to admit the pupils from the districts that defeated consolidation. The teacher of the junior room has far too much work to do any kind of justice to the children under her charge—46 pupils and seven classes. A third teacher and a third room are absolutely needed if all the children who apply from the outside districts are to be accommodated. And who is to foot the bill?

Since the above was in type, we learn that the School Board have been compelled to refuse admission of all pupils from other school districts, so that it is now up to these school district to open their schools and provide for their own district, seeing that they defeated consolidation.

THE SAME OLD JOKE

Perpetrated at Oyen

Speaking of the visit of the Musical Eckardt's at Oyen last week, the Oyen News says: "While reading some 'latest news' he handed Chinook rather hard jolt, 'Chinook, Monday, Oct. 25th. Word has just been received here that war has been declared in Europe.'"

The same old joke was used by the Eckardts during their entertainment here, only Hanna was substituted for Chinook. Don't worry, Oyen. Your "hard jolt" came at the next town the company gave an entertainment.

Snyder Acquitted

Chas. Philip Snyder, a resident of Youngstown, and well known among baseball fans in Chinook, was acquitted by a jury at Calgary last week, in the criminal court, on a charge of using seditious language at Youngstown some few months ago, in connection with the sinking of the Louisiana, and also his approval of the crucifixion of soldiers by the Germans.

Terrible and Fatal Fire
NEAR CHINOOK

Three Henry Children Burnt to Death

Mr. and Mrs. Henry Also Very Badly Burned—
Mrs. Henry May Succumb.

EARLY this morning, the whole town was horrified, to learn that the shack occupied by Mr. W. H. Henry and his family, on his farm, about three miles north-east of Chinook, had been burned to the ground, and that their three dear little children had perished in the flames; and also that both Mr. and Mrs. Henry were badly burned.

Mr. W. A. Chase, who lives about half a mile from the Henry home, brought the sad news to town this morning, as he came into Chinook for the doctor and the undertaker, who quickly autoted out the Chase home, whither Mr. and Mrs. Henry had gone.

From what particulars we have been able to gather of the terribly tragedy, it seems that Mr. Henry had gotten up about three o'clock a.m. to make up the fire. Going to bed again, he must have fallen asleep. While he was asleep, he found the whole of the interior of the house on fire. The little girl of five years of age, who was in the next room, the kitchen—fired the fire. The fire originally started, as it was at the time of the fire, the little lad of 3, and Dean, the baby, were in the room with their parents.

From what particulars we have been able to gather of the terribly tragedy, it seems that Mr. Henry had gotten up about three o'clock a.m. to make up the fire. Going to bed again, he must have fallen asleep. While he was asleep, he found the whole of the interior of the house on fire. The little girl of five years of age, who was in the next room, the kitchen—fired the fire. The fire originally started, as it was at the time of the fire, the little lad of 3, and Dean, the baby, were in the room with their parents.

At this time of writing it is impossible to tell how it will end with the parents. Mrs. Henry is terribly burned about her feet, legs to her hips, and her hands and arms, the skin being off these parts, and the flesh loose in some places, and is in a very precarious condition. Mr. Henry is similarly burned, perhaps not quite so badly, but sustained bad cuts by the broken glass in addition.

Several of the citizens motored out to the Henry place, and the scene that met their sight will not be easily erased from their memories. On the partly burned little cot lay what remained of the body of Grace, there being missing part of one side, one leg gone and the other a charred bone, both arms gone. On the remains of another cot in the other room, where little Wesley had lain, was found but a little heap of blackened bones; no trace of baby Dean could be found, only, perhaps, what might have been a piece of the skull. It was a sight that would have moved the hardest heart, and hushed all to silent reverence in the midst of such a tragedy and sudden desolation and sorrow, and all that it will mean to mother and father when the realization of the awful tragedy that has fallen upon them becomes a fact, which, mercifully, for the present they are unconscious, under the strain of which some minds may well give way.

We understand that as soon as they can be moved Mrs. and Mrs. Henry will be brought into town, where they can have every care and attention, both Mr. Peck and Mr. I. Deman opening their homes for them, but will be taken to Deman home.

Wide-spread sympathy is felt for the sorely afflicted parents.

Chinook Breezes

Monday morning had a decided wintery appearance.

Mr. C. R. Brownell is one of the latest to purchase an auto—a Ford.

The Chinook Women's Institute will meet in the schoolhouse next Saturday, Nov. 6th.

The time of service at the Chinook Methodist church will change next Sunday from 7.30 to 7 p.m. for the winter months.

Mrs. Jno. Featherston has purchased the Howard property on Main Street, so that her boys can live in town and attend school here.

A patriotic box social will be held at Laughlin schoolhouse, on Friday night, November 12th. We look to see a good turn out, also a good time as usual.

Good Morning!

Some of our bachelor residents have recently purchased building lots in town. Funny, isn't it?

Good Evening!

Time Flies!

Already the Rural Municipalities are making preparations for the nominations and election for the 1916 councils, all of which reminds us that the year 1915 is fast coming to a close.

What Has Happen in Chinook

The Claresholm school board has found it necessary to refuse the admission to the public school for the present of any more pupils from outside of the school districts on account of overcrowding of the class rooms.

Visits His Old Home

J. M. Davis was down from Coltholme over Sunday to see how his place down here is looking this year. He had business in Calgary and when he was that near, he thought he would take two or three days longer to visit his old home.—Nanton News.

On an Errand of Mercy

Mr. Quayle, formerly editor in chief of the Lethbridge Herald, but now of the Government Bureau, Edmonton, was a Chinook visitor on Monday, and also a caller at the Advance office, being an old friend of the editor's. Mr. Quayle's visit was in connection with the Patriotic Fund.

Train Time Changes

The passenger train leaving Saskatoon and Calgary on Sunday evenings and arriving in Chinook on Monday mornings, will in future leave at the same time on Saturday evening instead arriving here on Sunday mornings. There will no trains either to or from here on Monday mornings until further notice.

In conversation with the proprietor of the Chinook Pharmacy—now open for business—he said that it was remarkable the number of drug stores in the province being run by person not qualified according to the law to do so. This was a serious menace to the public, as well as an injustice to those men who had studied and passed their examinations.

One of Toronto's richest men, the owner of a departmental store is reported from Switzerland as having made an offer of a million marks for the return by Germany of a prisoner of war. Along with the money was to be given a guarantee that the person, whoever he may have been, would take no further part in the war. According to the story, Germany declined the offer. P. T. Barnum is dead, but his soul, like that of John Brown, goes marching on, and this may have been part of an advertising scheme.

History Repeats Itself

A Parallel Case

In view of this latest outrage, by which the Germans have still further scandalized themselves, a reference to a past event may show that it may have been the one thing needed to rouse the British democracy to action.

The tearing of scrap of paper into shreds, though leading to the quickening of the conscience of the rulers of Britain, did not appeal so powerfully to the masses; but the murder of this English horse bids fair to be the spark that will set the heather on fire, and kindle a flame in the heart of Britain that will not be quenched till the foul deed has been amply avenged.

Nearly two centuries ago, the Spaniard, claiming the sole right of trading with the New World, allowed Britain the petty privilege of despatching thither, annually, a single ship of 600 tons. Our Democracy after being this affront for years, was at last roused to fury by Jenkins' ear. Like Drake, Anson and many other daring sea captains, Jenkins plied his hazardous trade in the waters of the Spanish Main, but being overhauled and his ship boarded, he was slashed over the head with a cutlass, which almost severed one of his ears. A Spanish captain ruthlessly tore off the bleeding member, and flung it in his face with the insolent demand to take it home and show it to his King and tell him what he had done.

Well, that little shrunken bit of English flesh caught on and roused the smouldering wrath of the populace to such a pitch that would brook no denial till war was declared, contrary to the wishes of their rulers, Walpole telling them that though they might set the bells of St. Paul's aringing they would soon be wringing their hands. But the people proved wiser than their rulers, for though started by such a trivial incident, it was a righteous war, for on its results hung the whole question of the control of the destiny of the New World.

It may be said that Miss Cavell was doing wrong in assisting her fellow-countrymen to escape, but that is only a wrong in the eyes of men who were committing a greater wrong in being in Belgium at all. And it looks as if the spilt blood of this noble martyr, calling loudly for vengeance, will again start the wrath of the Democracy into a blaze that will assist Lord Derby in his task of clothing the young manhood of the Empire in khaki, and send them forth to hurl those men of Kultur from that land which they have so defiled with innocent blood.

On this war, too, hangs some mighty issues; whether small states shall retain the power of self government, and whether the British merchantmen shall retain the proud right to sail unmolested over the four seas, both possibly only through the complete overthrow of Kaiserism.

Constantinople Besieged Often Last Twenty Centuries

Photos by American Press Association.

There is a legend told of this tower which prophesies that when the tower falls so will Constantinople. 5.—Mosque of St. Sophia, Constantinople. 6.—A street vender, Constantinople.

ALL eyes are watching Constantinople and the allied attack on the Turkish city. Military experts both in this country and Europe agree that the British and French forces, aided by their Italian allies, will secure one of the most decisive victories of the war at this point and thereby be placed in a position to give more aid to Russia by keeping the huge armies of the east adequately supplied with ammunition and also providing an outlet for the immense Russian crop of grain, now in such great demand all over the continent of Europe.

Constantinople finds herself more seriously menaced than in all her 42 years of Turkish rule. Not that she has not been besieged and threatened during that time, for indeed besieging Constantinople either on the field of battle or in the subtler precincts of diplomacy has always been the sport of kings.

More than once in the last century the besiegers were practically in sight of the city, and in the Balkan war the residents of the city paused in the course of their daily avocations to listen to the roar of the summer guns in the distance. But always before something had happened to save Constantinople.

First Recorded Siege.
The first recorded siege in the long list that the city has undergone was about 170 A. D., when Septimius Severus contended with Pescennius Niger for his position as Roman emperor in the east. The fortifications of Byzantium were famous throughout the world, all the scientific means of defense then known were at her command, and her navy, manned by skillful, brave seamen, was feared by every other country. For three years she sustained the siege and only when the ravages of famine became so horrible that the weaker became food for the stronger did she finally yield to her Roman captors. From then until her capture by Constantine in 324 A. D. the city was without a strong government and suffered frightful hardships.

The first siege of the Saracens, about 678, brought with it a new and terrible means of defense, Greek fire, the most destructive agent then known to man. It could be projected on objects either near at hand or at a distance and would burn on water or on stone as readily as on substances that could be themselves ignited.

This was the first great siege of the Moslems. The second came about a hundred years later. Eighteen ships, mostly manned by Christian slaves, were sent out to prevent aid from reaching Constantinople, while 150,000 foot soldiers besieged the walls. The siege lasted eighteen months. Only five of the 1,800 ships returned to Syria, and only the barest remnant of the great army ever reached Damascus.

Sovereigns Accumulated Wealth.
As the centuries went on Constantinople grew slowly weaker, though the authoritative accounts of its riches during the tenth, eleventh and twelfth centuries sound like the tales of a magician. Its customs revenues alone amounted to 20,000 pieces of gold daily, and in spite of the great cost of keeping the armies on a constant war footing, of building splendid public edifices, of supporting a luxurious court and a magnificent church, the sovereigns accumulated vast personal wealth which foot soldiers besieged the walls. The connection of Constantinople with the fourth crusade was one of the romantic incidents in its history. The crusaders were called on to oust a pretender and restore the rightful heir to the throne. Aided by the Venetians they at once set about the siege of Constantinople. In the spring of 1203, 410 vessels carrying 60,000 soldiers sailed up the sea of Marmara to the very walls of the city.

The capture of Constantinople by the Turks was not a sudden thing. The Turks were established in Europe with a capital at Adrianople before they ever laid siege to the greater city. In 1347 the Christian emperor made terms with the Moslem ruler by giving his daughter in marriage to Orchan, an Ottoman, the founder of the ruling dynasty. A condition of this bargain provided the first Moslem outrage in the Christian city, when Orchan sold his Christian prisoners in the market place of Constantinople. Men, women and children of all castes were exposed naked and sold into a terrible bondage. This is the last time that the city was ever actually captured by an invading host. Constantinople has been often besieged since then, though not after the medieval fashion, but it has never since fallen.

How Turks Took City.

The circumstances of the capture of the city by the Turks have never been forgotten or forgiven by the Christian peoples of southeastern Europe. The sultan had promised his soldiers that when they entered the city he would reserve for himself only the walls and the public buildings. Everything else, people and treasure, was to be theirs. Waiting for them in and about the church of St. Sophia the invaders found a multitude of Christians, 20,000 of them, waiting with sublime faith the miracle that would deliver them from the Moslems.

More than once during this time was Constantinople threatened by force, more than once was the Dardanelles passed by unfriendly warships, but not a single time did the city actually sustain other than a diplomatic siege. In 1507 an English fleet under Admiral Duckworth entered the Dardanelles and appeared before Constantinople, but the Turks entreated the admiral in diplomatic negotiations, at the same time hurriedly strengthening their fortifications until he was obliged to retreat beyond the Dardanelles, and Constantinople was saved.

In 1829 Constantinople was seriously threatened by Russian land forces, but not until 1878 did Russia actually au-proach the goal of her ambition. Not until her soldiers were actually in sight of Constantinople did the sultan accept her proffered terms of peace.

From 1878 until 1912 Constantinople was not menaced by an enemy. But in the fall of 1912 the Balkan allies, after a series of amazing and dramatic victories, swept over the plains of Thrace and attacked the defenses of Thessalonica, practically the last defense of the city. What the disorganized Turkish armies would have done alone cannot be guessed, but they had their old ally, diplomacy, on their side, as well as the dread cholera which attacked the Bulgarians and Turks alike.

Pink and Blue

I KNOW a lovely old-fashioned bedroom which is a joy to behold. The work is white. The paper is old blue with a small pink-and-white conventional figure—very small and very conventional. The window curtains are pink and white striped. This sounds queer, I admit, but it's good looking. The rug is deep blue. The four-poster bed has a tester valance and skirt of white muslin—it is trimmed with a white ball fringe. There is also a fringed honeycomb counterpane in white.

The bed—the headboard and posts are white—is mahogany. There is a mahogany Windsor chair, a diminutive, a mahogany table and a chest—all of mahogany also. The mantel above the fireplace holds two brass candlesticks—between them hangs an old colonial mirror. An upholstered arm chair boasts a slip cover of white muslin and there is a cushion of flowered cotton on the floor of the bed.

DON'T be afraid to put a few minor improvements on the inside of your home, even if it is a rented one. It is your home, nevertheless, and if a built-in bookcase will make you happier, or if white woodwork will make home a happier place do not hesitate to expend a little money and labor in this good cause!

PROMINENT AND CULTURED MEXICO ADRIFT ON A SEA OF REVOLUTION

FREQUENT clashes which have recently occurred on the Mexican border indicate that big things are soon to happen in our troublesome neighbor. It is admitted on all sides that the diplomatic situation with European powers has delayed the action necessary to restore order.

An insight into the actual conditions existing in Mexico is interesting now. Cultured Mexico is adrift on the world's sea. No longer have the seats at the marble topped tables outside the fashionable Chapultepec cafe in Mexico City educated and refined occupants. Zapata and his band of savages have driven the last native Mexican of breeding out of Mexico City. Those not ejected by Zapata were hurried forth by Carranza, including the Brazilian and Guatemalan ambassadors.

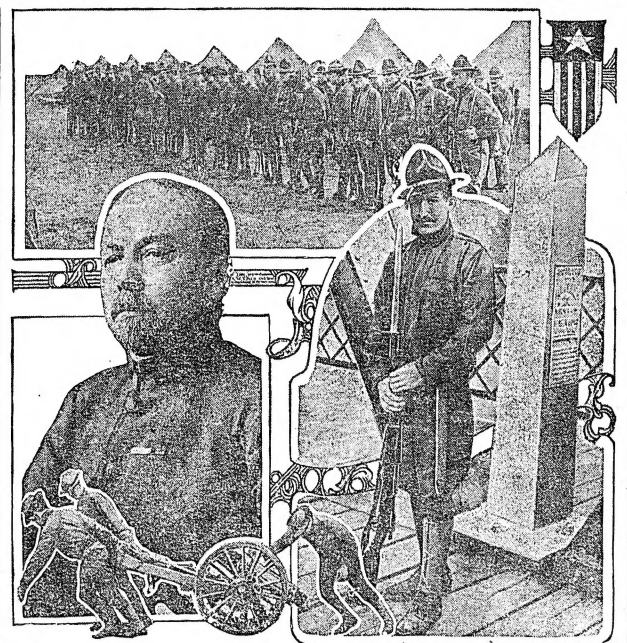

Instead of being in Mexico, these polished dons are now scattered everywhere, many impoverished, a few in comfortable circumstances. Let us glance over a few of these distinguished exiles.

In Spain we find Diego Bello, Florencio Noriega and Luis R. Creel at Madrid; Guernandino Enriquez and Indalecio Sanchez Gavi, the lawyer, at Barcelona; Adolfo de la Lanza, Jose Sanchez Ramos and General Manuel Mondragon at San Sebastian.

In Paris are living J. Y. Limantour, the wizard of finance; Pablo Escandon, the capitalist; De Zapas Enriquez, the writer; Aurelio Canales, Luis Tormel, Francisco L. de la Barra, Guillermo Obregon, Jr., General Fernandez Gonzales, Ramon Corona and Carlos Gonzales.

There are many prominent Mexicans in New York city, among whom we find Joaquin Casasus, Emilio Robasa, Alonso Martical, E. Sanchez, Gavito Benin, Vinciano Smith, Lolla Elverson, Rafael Martinez Carillo, all lawyers; ex-President Huerta's son Jorge, cousin Fernando Gil and son-in-law, Senator Colon; General Felix Diaz, General Hernandez Limon, Jose Luis Requena, Ricardo Guzman, Basilio Lamy Paris, Antonio Guzman, General Rubio Navarrete, Enrique Fernandez Castaño, Colonel Fernandez Zenate, General Carlos Garcia Huitaco.

Two years ago, in Mexico City, Luis Garcia Iñiguez, Rivero Collado, E. Turriana de Valle, Andres Matamoros, Carlos Landa y Escandon and J. Luis Requena were six capitalists of importance. J. Sanchez Juarez, a grandson of Mexico's liberator, Dr. Jose Juarez, is also among the exiles. A few more of Troops on border, General Funston and the International boundary.

the big Mexicans in New York are Marquis de San Juan de Rayas and Javier Pina Aguirre, both capitalists; ex-president of Mexico Pedro Lascur-ain, Eduardo N. Iturbide and Emeterio de la Garza, Jr. These constitute only a fragment of Mexico's noted exiles, men of talent who opened that country and made it attractive to the rest of the world. They are kept out of Mexico because their property is coveted.

Chinook Breezes

The blockade at the elevators is only partially relieved by odd cars coming in daily.

Gregg--At Chinook, Monday, October 24th, to Mr. and Mrs. Norman Gregg, a son.

Mr. Milligan, sr. is putting in a chopping mill at the new livery barn.

Station Agent Strong purchased a Ford car this week,
and now Johnny will be doing things.

Mrs. A. R. Morrison, and family, is visiting her mother, Mrs. A. Gingles, and her sister,
Mrs. Norman Gregg.

The ladies' aid will meet at the home of Mrs. A. Nicholson on Wednesday afternoon next, November 10th. All are very cordially invited to be present.

"Hallowe'en passed off very quietly in town this year, compared with former occasions, and the fun was left pretty much to the kiddies, some of whom had "the time of their lives."

The threshing machines are pounding away every available minute. There is still a very large quantity of grain to be threshed in this district which needs some weeks of good weather to complete.

Cheerfulness at Meals.
A thousand little windows are opened by the curvy conversation at the breakfast table through which to look into the depths and shallows of the home.

Sometimes the only meeting place of a family of growing boys and girls is at the table. Yet, as a rule, how much is left to be desired in the way of cheerfulness and conversation during the mealtime of most large families!

There is only one way to create a revolution in the family conscious of having dull, silent and uninteresting meals. It is for each member of it to turn over a new leaf. Each one must come to the table prepared to show his or her best side, the side too often withheld from family life, be it bestowed ever so abundantly elsewhere.

Every member of the family must realize an evening closes in and the varicolored friends of the busy day are gathered together that there must be a little unselfish effort made by each one if the unity is to be preserved and the family life kept harmonious.

The cheerfulness that tells most at family meals finds expression in light, pleasant, happy talk. Do not bring your troubles to the table, but interesting stories, anecdotes and the happenings of the corner of the world in which your work is situated. If the father brings home pleasant things to talk about, his business life will be rest and glowing to those who love and believe in him and can see life only through his eyes. To be cheerful is not to be artificial; neither is it forcing insincerely upon those around.
Cheerfulness is a form of unselfishness, a difficult, noble form, which is too seldom given the appreciation it deserves.

A Way of a Clever Mother.
Few people are ready in little ways for sickness. I keep on hand a suit case, says a careful mother, containing a kimono, two nightdresses, bed slippers, brush and comb and toothbrush for emergency. Much confusion and burry can be saved in a household, especially where there are children, if the mother will renew certain supplies before they are quite used up. I always keep on hand shoe laces and shoe buttons, side elastic, a new pair each of gloves and stockings, a toothbrush or two and many other things in my supply drawer, a plan I learned from painful experience of breakages and holes found at the last moment, when it was too late to rush out for new articles. No one is allowed to help themselves from this source of supply without permission.

NOTICE

Will the stockholder in the local elevator who wrote to headquarters regarding help employed, step into the office and explain why he should write and why he should wander from the truth?
